Boosting -- Beneficial and Otherwise.

These are the days when the boost er flourishes mightly in the land. His rule of life is, "Don't knock, but boost." In many of the large cities of America, and in some not quite so large, he forms himself into a committee of one to boost the place where he fives and does business. Presently he organizes a Boosters' Club, the members of which are predact to demonstrate to the outside world that the only place to live in is Oskosh, Kalamazoo or Walia Walia, as the case may be.

Now in general purpose and scope, all of this is blobby commendable. The spirit of optimism is to be approved and encouraged wherever it | is displayed. Only like every other good thing, it is possible to have too much of optimism, especially when the optimism is either entirely superficial or stoppdly misapplied not to speak of the occasions when it is used to blind the eagerly visiterating many to the schemes of the coldiy calculating few.

It is good, for example, to boost a city as being best for business, but it is not good to boost it for this reason only. If this fact is overlooked, it is easy to see what Indoas: When interests other and more important than business demands recognition, they are likely to meet with opposition from many, because of fear that they will harm the business which is being boosted. Morality, home tife education in the best and highest meaning, any one of these things is of more importance than mere business. yet not always in the estimate of the intoxicated booster.

There is another saying concerning the work of really scientific boosting, which should not be forgotten: "Every knock in the proper spirit is a boost." This may appear difficult of Heroes indeed they were, those hardy acceptance at first, but it is true, nevertheless. Consider, for Instance, to whom the full mead of praise will the case of Mayor Gaynor, of New York. He is a hooster, confident that Thank you for the invitation to New York is the finest city on the "visit the old town you never should map. Because he really and truly benike, and thereby hangs quite a pose the evils which exist. With this dory. I might tell as my apology for removed, he knows that it will be eaving, but for which there is not much ther and nobler than ever, and time or space here. How can weever that if it has been necessary to know which choice would have knock, it has been for the purpose of urned out the better? Often in life giving the city he loves a boost which

The Fourth of July cration must have sense as well as sentiment in it these days and it is only cey M. Depew.

Just realize that one thing and you crimson sunsets and the bired jester of an aristocracy of wealth, can get the boosters' applauding while big obliged to knock. Therefore

This is the kind of knocking that counts, but the knocker that knocks from pure cussedness and downright penurisness is the knocker that every booster should knock until he is completely knocked out.
